US/China Tensions Impact the Semiconductor Industry

Open-Source Intelligence in Action

Background

- Ongoing US/China tensions continue to have repercussions on the global supply chain, leading to the proliferation of government controls on sales of chips to China, the world's largest semiconductor market.
- Heightened concerns over vulnerabilities and dependencies spur US policymakers to pass legislature in support of an economic plan to subsidize US production of semiconductors and boost US scientific research to better compete with China.
- China has challenged US actions with the World Trade Organization, claiming they hinder normal international trade.
